UNION COLLEGE
SCHENECTADY, NEW YORK

Union College was incorporated by the Regents of the University of the State of New York on the 25th day of February, 1795. It was the second college incorporated in the state, and the first north of the city of New York and west of the Hudson river. It received its name from the circumstance that several denominations co-operated in its organization, and it was the first college in the United States which was not of a strictly denominational character.

The following undergraduate courses are offered:

A. B. Course A	This course offers a full classical training. Latin must be offered at entrance. Greek may be offered at entrance, or may be begun in freshman year. If Greek is not taken, modern language or general science is required.

Civil Engineering Course	This course offers the foundation of a broad engineering education, comprising all the essential subjects of the profession.
Electrical Engineering Course	This course gives a broad and thorough engineering education, with the specific instruction requisite for electrical engineering.
Chemistry Course	This course prepares for positions in industrial chemistry, for teaching chemistry, or for university studies in candidacy for a doctor's degree in chemistry.
Physics Course	This course in the first two years takes up the same subjects as are pursued in the first two years of the course in civil engineering. The last two years provide special work in preparation for advanced scientific study and technical pursuits.

The following graduate courses are open to graduates of Union College, or of any institution of a standing recognized by the faculty, who have done the necessary undergraduate work.

Dartmouth College

Hanover, New Hampshire

Founded by royal charter from George III, 1769. The charter of the College was an outgrowth of a plan of the Reverend Eleazar Wheelock for the education of Indians. The idea of the founder was early modified and Dartmouth's development has been that of the other New England colleges. The attempt to expand its function and change its title to that of a university, which occurred in 1816, resulted in the famous law-suit known as the Dartmouth College Case, which brought decision in favor of the College.

Dartmouth College has now a restricted enrollment of about 2,000 students and a faculty numbering over 250.

The courses of undergraduate instruction lead to the degree of Bachelor of Arts only.

The Associated Schools are:

The Medical School Established in 1798. Candidates for the A. B. or B. S. degree in Dartmouth College may satisfy the specific requirements of both the College and the Medical School in three years, and may elect the first year in medicine as the senior year in college. Dartmouth Medical School has bestowed no degrees since 1914.

John P. Bowler, Dean

The Thayer School of Civil Engineering Established 1867, essentially a graduate school, which offers a general course of study and practice in Civil Engineering, so developed as to include the essential principles of all important branches.

Raymond R. Marsden, Dean

The Amos Tuck School of Administration and Finance Founded by Edward Tuck in 1900. A graduate school offering a two-year course in business administration, leading to the degree of Master of Commercial Science. Open to graduates of approved colleges.

William R. Gray, Dean

Unsurpassed opportunity for the inquiring mind to become acquainted with the masterpieces of literature. Students encouraged to write lyrics and one-act plays. The laboratory plan of instruction makes use of a well-equipped stage and open courts especially adapted to pageantry and dancing.

Pillar of Fire Institution

Location: ZAREPHATH, N. J.

Situated thirty-five miles from New York City. Over nine hundred acres, bounded on one side by the Millstone River and bisected by the charming Delaware and Raritan Canal. A place of loveliness and action. Sister Institution to Belleview College. Offers full preparatory and college courses. No test of any particular religious creed is applied for admission. Alma College and Belleview College, orthodox and Methodistic in faith, take an emphatic stand for Bible Christianity. They are not in sympathy with so-called "higher criticism," and, though eager to know and teach all of the advanced truths of science, they draw the line on mere speculative philosophy and hypotheses which obliterate and destroy the old paths and mark out nothing certain and reliable in their stead. Young men and young women at Alma and Belleview live in a clean and wholesome Christian atmosphere. Both schools insist on high moral standards.
In connection with Alma College in New Jersey is the Zarephath Bible Institute, and in connection with Belleview College in Denver is the Denver Bible School—schools which offer general missionary and ministerial training on orthodox lines.

Rates are exceptionally easy. Opportunity is given in each school for a limited number of students to work in partial payment for board and tuition.

REV. RAY B. WHITE, A.M., D.D.
Location:
WESTMINSTER, COLO.

Situated on what has been truthfully called the grandest scenic promontory in the United States. Commands nearly three hundred miles of mountains and plains, and overlooks, from its vantage point, the beautiful city of Denver. A place of health and inspiration. Westminster College was established and for some years operated by the Presbyterians. During the late war, owing to financial difficulties, it was abandoned, and in 1920 was taken over by the Pillar of Fire Church.
Pursuant to its plan to restore the college to its place as a first class institution of learning, the Pillar of Fire is now offering high school and junior college courses, the latter being equivalent to freshman and sophomore courses in the regular standard college.

ONEIDA INSTITUTE

ONEIDA, KENTUCKY

A YOUNG feudist rode out with the sun as it rose over Big Bull Mountain, alternately whooping and humming the latest ditty of the Cumberlands. At a significant point on the trail he had a bitter thought, whereupon his "Colt .45" smote the early morning stillness six times and rested in its holster. This was notice to the neighborhood that a bad man was passing through, a challenge to enemies to do battle if they dared.

In a gap across the river the challenge was answered—as such challenges had never been answered before in the Cumberlands. Another young feudist, lately turned crusader, bent his back while laying the cornerstone of an educational institution destined to change sentiment and conduct most emphatically in that neck of the woods.

The young man on muleback disappeared around the river bend where he met an enemy who was quicker on the trigger than himself. His body now rests under the yellow clay of a nearby knoll. The young man who so strangely accepted his challenge continued to work on the foundation of his school, and the feuds thereabouts soon wilted and vanished under the light that school radiated. So began to pass also the hate that created them and the illiteracy that accompanied them.

Thus began the career of Burns of the Mountains, a story stranger than fiction. Such was the birth of Oneida Institute, now proclaimed the most unusual school of its kind in America. Died soon after the Baker-Howard feud, the White-Garrard feud, the Phillpot-Griffin feud and numerous other vendettas. In the thirty years of its life to date Oneida Institute has given opportunity to thousands of young mountaineers who, but for its ministrations, would have been without hope. They are the offspring of America's earliest settlers. They respond to opportunity as the soldiers of Washington—from whom many of them are descended—responded to the call of freedom. They offer the altruistic the best possible investment in benevolence.

"Turns Out Winners"

Finest equipment. New 60 foot pool under glass. Summer tan all winter. One hour from Chicago. Ten Grades. Limited to 100 superior boys from six to sixteen rating an intelligence quotient of 100 or better. Faculty of twenty.

Mr. John Clayton, famous foreign correspondent and now with the Chicago Civic Opera Company, gives this account of his first impressions of Todd:

'My first visit to Todd came during the school year. I found, as Roger Hill, its principal, puts it, 'not merely an institution of learning, but a laboratory for self expression and citizenship training.' 'Activity' seems to be the keynote on the campus. I visited Todd about four o'clock in the afternoon of a school day, and in my walk about the campus and buildings found intensely interested groups doing voluntary and original work in almost every phase of human endeavor.

"One group, under student direction, was working in their beautifully equipped theater, rehearsing a play which had been written and planned by another student. And I learned that every Saturday night they produced one of these original works.

"I found one squad out for football practice. Another squad was working with the track coach. In one corner of the campus a group of younger boys were preparing their own individual garden plots, and debating the respective merits of onions or pansies for border planting. Another group was busily sanding and varnishing some tremendous looking poles forty feet long, and to my interrogatory 'What in the world?' I was informed that these were spars for the cruising yawl Iris, owned by the Todd Sea Scout Troop and kept in Great Lakes Harbor in the fall and spring for week end trips, and sailed to northern Michigan in the summer.

"In the print-shop I found a group of editors and printers at work on their school magazine. From the Music Building came weird sounds that hinted of future orchestral melodies. In the manual shop I found intense activity with tools, seemingly directed in the main toward the construction of model airplanes and racing yachts, the latter almost unbelievably beautiful. And I was informed that they would sail true and straight for miles any course desired.

"In the large paint shop I found a group preparing a new stage setting for an elaborate production of 'Everyman.' And the boy artist in charge informed me that the large flats and boxes which were getting their final spatter coat were 'not planned for realism but for symbolic impressionism, through the use of mass and line.' I hoped that my gasp was not audible to the lad.

"A continuance of the trip through the various buildings found boys in their own bright and cleverly decorated rooms connecting a telegraph set to a friend's room in another building. But always and wherever I found the boys they were intent upon some definite activity, and from the high standards set in each of these activities I could well understand how this group should have turned out state championship teams; winners of numerous awards in the Drama League of America's High School Play Contests in Chicago; model yacht plans that have been adopted as official for the Boy Scouts of America, and other works receiving national recognition.

"And I could understand what Mr. Hill meant when he said: 'Modern youth receives too few first hand experiences. In their place we have substituted the second hand ones of the movies, the bleachers, and—yes, the text books. We must have the text books and the three R's, but we really learn by doing things rather than by reading about things. The teacher gets all of the real value out of the ordinary class room lesson, because she has planned out the work; organized it in her mind and then cited it to the children in order that they may re-cite it back again. But life isn't a matter of reciting things. It is a matter of doing things, and thinking thoughts. And all we do at Todd is offer boys this opportunity.'

"It was for the purpose of giving this golden opportunity to my two lads that I placed them at Todd. Mrs. Clayton and myself have never ceased to rejoice over the step."

HORACE MANN SCHOOL FOR BOYS

TABOR

In the old whaling village of Marion, on Buzzards Bay, TABOR, an endowed school, combines new features with the best of the old academic traditions. A limited enrollment of 150 boys makes possible close personal contacts in their scholastic and social training. Instruction groups average between fifteen and twenty. Boys are thoroughly prepared for any college.

Sailing and cruising make the recreational program unique. During the fall and spring terms there are many interesting opportunities for boys who like boats. In addition to the racing fleet, there is a ninety-foot schooner which is used in taking parties of twenty-five boys at a time on week-end cruises to nearby ports.

High standing in efficiency ratings is rewarded by deep-sea cruises during the spring vacation to Central American countries. During these cruises on the vessels of the United Fruit and Agwi lines, the boys receive the training of cadets.

The summer session of seven weeks is open to boys from other schools who wish to enjoy a happy and constructive program. Tabor cooperates with other American schools in advancing International School-Boy Fellowship through exchanges with schools in England, France, and Germany.

The Choate School
Wallingford, Connecticut

The School was founded in 1896 by the Hon. William G. Choate and Mark Pitman.

Its location, about twelve miles north of New Haven, has proved to be one of the most healthful in New England.

Its numbers are large enough to make for strong esprit de corps and wholesome rivalry, without being so large as to prevent a distinct family life and the necessary attention to individuality and development.

Its policy is by a large corps of masters to give to each boy what he individually needs, without holding to any rigid system of forms.

Its effort is unsparing to strengthen in the boys' minds high motives of action which shall permanently control their lives; and to send out boys who are trained for responsible citizenship.

The Lower School prepares boys for the Upper School, as the Upper School prepares them for college.

A catalogue of the School is sent upon application, with the names of those who know intimately the School's work and character.

The Biblical Seminary in New York

(INTERDENOMINATIONAL)

WILBERT W. WHITE, President

FOUNDED UPON THE PRINCIPLE that adequate training for Christian leadership requires independent and comprehensive knowledge of the Bible itself. The central discipline in all departments is, therefore, direct mastery of the Bible. However, none of the studies usual to any department are neglected.

This Seminary is steadfastly evangelical in doctrine, and it devotes particular care to the cultivation of the spiritual life of the student.

Registered by the Board of Regents of the University of the State of New York as offering approved courses leading to the degrees of Bachelor of Sacred Theology, Master of Sacred Theology, Doctor of Sacred Theology, Bachelor of Religious Education, Master of Religious Education, and Doctor of Religious Education.

The Department of Theology

1. Regular Three-year Course in Theology leading to the degree of S. T. B.
2. Department of Graduate Work in Theology with courses leading to the degrees of S. T. M. and S. T. D.

In this department the course in Systematic Theology is organized to take advantage of modern educational processes. This is accomplished by applying, successively, to the study of Christian Doctrine the historical, psychological, and philosophical modes of approach, under the professors of the subjects indicated.

The Historical Approach. The first year is given to an examination of the progressive developments of Christian thinking, as they have found expression in the historic creeds and confessions and so contribute to the understanding of the basic truths of Systematic Theology.

The Psychological Approach. In the second year the psychological foundation for the Christian belief is investigated. The Christian's experience of faith in God, in the redemptive work of His Son, and in the soteriological assurances of evangelical Protestantism, is analyzed.

The Philosophical Approach. The third year course, entitled The Philosophy of the Christian Religion, considers the facts, principles, and doctrines of Systematic Theology as related to the thought and life of mankind.

The Department of Religious Education

Courses leading to the degrees of B.R.E., M.R.E., and D.R.E., designed to train teachers of the Bible in schools and colleges, directors of religious education in church schools, secretaries in Christian Associations, and those in like positions.

The Department of Missions

Two-year Course, with the missionary candidate's needs, including phonetics and missionary linguistics, especially provided for.

The Department of Social Service

Exceptional facilities for direct contacts and experience offered by the Lieut. White Neighborhood House, conducted, under expert supervision, by the Seminary.

RESIDENCES: 91 and 93 Mt. Vernon Street

Mrs. Margaret J. Stannard, Director

The Garland School was established in 1902 to provide special training for Home and Community Responsibilities.

The regular course, leading to diploma, is two years in length. Shorter courses are offered for advanced students.

These courses are planned to follow School or College work and to teach girls to apply the knowledge, gained by general study and experience, to the problems of daily living—the problems of Food, Clothing, and Use of Money and Child Care and Training.

Accommodation for resident students is provided in Home Houses where every girl has experience in homemaking activities.

The School is of immediate value to a girl for the intelligent direction of her own life; to increase her usefulness as a community worker; and to prepare her for the care of a home.

Two-year students of good standing may, if they choose, elect a major for the second year leading toward a wage-earning vocation.

Dr. Esenwein

How to write, what to write, and where to sell

Write for publication—serious books, fiction, drama. Develop the gifts you possess. Make a notable contribution to literature. Turn your knowledge and attainments to profitable account.

Short-Story and Article Writing, Play Writing, Versification, Writing for Children, Public Speaking, etc., taught personally by Dr. J. Berg Esenwein, for many years editor of Lippincott's Magazine, and a staff of proved literary experts. Constructive criticism. Frank, honest, helpful advice. Skilled assistance along modern lines.

One pupil has received over $5000 for work written mostly in spare time. A physically handicapped student has written a successful novel for young girls. Another student received over $1000 before completing her first course.

The portfolios of prominent people often yield very seasonable and salable material. If you have any thought of writing, let us advise you confidentially. The universities recognize the quality of our work, for over a hundred members of the English faculties of higher institutions are studying with our Literary Department. The editors recognize it, for they are constantly recommending our courses.

We publish The Writer's Library, descriptive booklet free. We also publish The Writer's Monthly, an indispensable magazine for literary workers, sample copy 25c. Besides our teaching service, we offer a manuscript criticism service.

Research

Someone has said that every business, even a peanut stand, should have a department of research. With the aid of noted psychologists and educators from many fields and at a cost that only the most generous and far-sighted financial backing could have made possible, Culver has studied the problem of really educating the modern American boy.

It has had the courage to tear down and examine from time to time the machinery of education; to scrap the obsolete and to adapt innovations of proved merit. That, more than its exceptional faculty and equipment, accounts for Culver's peculiar appeal to parents who seek for their sons something more than mere academic credits.

Descriptive literature will be sent on request. 50 Pershing Place, Culver, Indiana.

A School The Boy Will Like

Isn't that what you want for YOUR boy? You know how any boy will WORK when the work appeals to him and when the surroundings are congenial. That is one of the great secrets of the success of

St. John's Military Academy

This great school is famous for the ESPRIT of its students and the loyalty of its graduates. It takes a boy at the most impressionable period of his life and by a happy combination of military routine, study, and athletic sports, arouses first his INTEREST, which is quickly followed by loyalty and enthusiasm. With this attitude toward his school, the boy is ready to absorb much more than can be taught from books. The education at St. John's is not a mere "book learning" education. It is broader and deeper. It TRAINS a boy for life and MAKES HIM a GOOD citizen.

The good work of St. John's has been recognized by the government, which maintains a unit of the R. O. T. C. at the school under the supervision of Regular Army Officers.

A Big School for Little Boys

ATTENDANCE—There are two hundred fifty boarding pupils of Caucasian race, and ranging in age from six to fourteen years.

FACULTY—The teaching force consists of twenty-six men and women, chosen not only for their teaching ability but for their high character and interest in boys.

LOCATION—The school is located in the country midway between the business section of Los Angeles and the ocean. The land is high and near enough to the ocean to get the cooling breeze each afternoon.

HEALTH—The school has had a remarkable health record. It has lost only one boy by death during the twenty years of its existence and that one by an isolated case of spinal meningitis. Epidemics are rare and never severe.

MILITARY—There being no high school course, all of the cadets, both officers and privates, are of grammar school age. No one can overestimate the value in character development to a boy at this formative age when placed in such a position of responsibility as the command of a company.

BUILDINGS—There are twenty-three buildings belonging to the school and all those in which the pupils sleep are constructed of hollow tile so as to make them safe from fire.

RELIGION—The school is undenominational. Although the headmaster is a Protestant, the teaching force includes Catholics and Christian Scientists, and the student body has among its members pupils of many shades of religious belief.

ALWAYS OPEN—On account of the extreme youth of the pupils the school never closes, so that parents who are abroad may know that there is no danger of their sons being without proper supervision at the close of the school year. There are usually about seventy-five pupils in attendance during the summer.

SUMMER SCHOOL—Four weeks are spent each summer at our permanent camp on Catalina Island and for the remainder of the summer headquarters are at the school, the pupils making frequent trips to mountains and beaches.

COURSES OF STUDY—The courses of study are about the same as the first to the eighth grade of the public school, there being some additions, such as a foreign language and the military drill, together with the changes made possible by the small classes.

EXPENSES—The rate for resident pupils varies from $800.00 to $900.00 for the school year and the extras, including uniforms, will come to approximately another hundred dollars. Tuition for day pupils is $500.00 for the school year.

BACK NUMBERS

WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA

¶ Notwithstanding the fact that the value of each edition of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA for up-to-date reference in regard to the living notables of the country is entirely supplanted by the succeeding new edition, the old volumes gain, year by year, in historical and reminiscent usefulness. The latest volume will, of course, always present the living with such increased completeness as to be indispensable for daily reference, yet the old editions become more and more valuable as records of those who have died, many of which it would be difficult, if not impossible, to find elsewhere. This fact is meeting with wide recognition, so that public, institutional and private libraries are keeping the old volumes as a series of the utmost value for presenting, with a completeness nowhere else attainable, the biographical history of the United States and all its varied interests and activities.

You should keep a complete file of Who's Who in America — from the first volume to the latest. If you have not procured the earlier volumes, BEGIN NOW.
